

“Anybody Speaks To You On The Case, Inform The Court Immediately“

...Jury Manager Warns Prospective Jurors

The National Jury Manager of the Judiciary, Cllr. Andrew Nimley, is sending a sharp warning to prospective jurors to inform the court immediately if anyone speaks to them about a case before them.

On Thursday, October 22, 2026, Cllr Nimley made the remarks during the jury orientation at the Temple of Justice in Monrovia, addressing large numbers of prospective jurors.

“It is an offense for any person who is not a member of the jury to attempt to influence you in any way.”

He further explained their duties and functions. Cllr. Nimley also told them, “If any person speaks to you about the case, you should inform the court immediately, and keep statements made in the jury room confidential.”

The Jury Manager also cautioned them to decide on the evidence presented in court and remain uninfluenced by anyone who is not a member of the jury.

“Keep statements made in the jury room confidential; you should not discuss the case with any person other than members of the jury. It is contempt of court punishable by a fine and/or imprisonment to repeat any statement made in the jury room,” among other things.
